Unbound Roots

Curated by
Alie Jones & Toshia Christal

March 13 – April 21, 2020
ABOUT THE EXHIBITION

Unbound Roots creates a journey of transcendence through acceptance, pleasure, and liberation. In relation to the sprouting, core strength and growth of a rooted tree, the curators of UnBound Roots provides a safe space that encourages individual awareness, generational healing and high vibratory engagements. This exhibit aims to shift the commodified conversations of self care and wellness within the Black body. We vow to embrace the power of all cycles; mental, physical, and spiritual as a number one priority.

Unbound Roots expands discussions around Black wellness, community, and self care. Empowering Black bodies to flourish and thrive, sharing wellness-oriented lifestyle practices as a means for thriving no longer merely surviving. We look forward to holding space for Black and brown bodies who have been conditioned to believe healing was not for them.

Unbound Roots explores limitless heights and embracing all possibilities. The art selected ranges from chakra healing, interactive installations, sculptures, sanctuaries for the mind, and body positive imagery. We plan to heal collectively through art. By pairing these elements with engaging community programs such as yoga, sound healing, engaging workshops, and cyphers. Through the lens of contemporary and modern art, Unbound roots: is a creative tool for tangible, healthy, and effective practices. Unbound Roots is a healing movement. Permission to be free, to be ourselves, to be unbound.

ABOUT THE CURATORS

Alie Jones
Alie Jones (Alexandria) is a self-care advocate, writer, artist, and Creole mermaid. She is the founder of Bodacious Bombshells, a wellness collective based in Oakland. Alie is passionate about promoting mental health awareness, body positivity, and engaging in new conversations through the arts. Alie graduated with a BA in Cinematic Arts and Technology from CSU Monterey Bay and a minor in Creative Writing and Social Action. She also received an MPA from the Middlebury Institute of International Studies with a concentration in nonprofit organizations. Her work on Black Mental Health and self-care has been featured on Afropunk, xoNecole, and Medium.com.

Toshia Christal
Toshia Christal born May 11, 1983 has been creating art since early childhood. An Oakland native and self-taught artist of many mediums, she is A Berkeley high school Graduate of the 2001 class.

Toshia is an entrepreneur vending at local events, providing cosmetology services to clients, teaching and exhibiting art as often as possible. Everything she “needed” to know she consumed during her high school years. This exposure to the basics and boredom with repetition were enough to manifest her own creative forces. She continues to quench her thirst for knowledge and new technique on the daily bases.

Experimenting with any material she can get her hands on, her art is often feminine, political, abstract or infused with vaginas. The artistic reflections in her life are particularly stimulated by the art of African traditions, spiritual visions, nature, lovers, anatomy, and her gratitude for the mind and body of a (womb)an.
Aambr Newsome grew up in Sacramento, California where she first found her love of the Arts while working on decorations, art projects for school, and various other contraptions that were made from random objects found wherever she went.

Currently, she spends her time illustrating and writing an independent comic that is a social commentary on being a young working class woman of color living in an underground society, while pursuing her B.A. in Fine Arts. Many of her other artistic endeavors include muraling, sculpting, painting, printmaking, and 2-D layered dioramas.

While she gained most of her experience through school, painting in the community, and set design, she has also assisted in curating, preparing installations, and artistic event planning. Now, she lives in Oakland, California where she exhibits her work and continues her studies.

DERRICK BELL

Derrick Bell is a visual artist and art educator. Originally from Cincinnati, Ohio, he received his B.A. in Studio Art from Morehouse College in Atlanta, Georgia and his M.A. in Art Education from Mount St. Joseph University in Cincinnati, Ohio.

He moved to Oakland, California five years ago to teach art and design. Since Derrick has been in the Bay, he’s had the honor of exhibiting in multiple art shows in Oakland and San Francisco. Recently he traveled to Kimberley, South Africa to be a part of the ArtLit Exhibition at the William Humphrey Art Gallery. While in South Africa, he participated on an artist’s panel for ArtLit at Sol Plaatje University and also spoke at Kimberley Boys’ High School about his journey as an artist.

He currently works out of his studio in East Oakland. When asked how he describe his art, this is what he said, “I am interested in the study of human behavior; its psychological and emotional impact on society and how constructed conditions-Rules, Policies, and Uncontested Mindsets affect the human collective and individual consciousness, notably people of the African diaspora. My work seeks to question, explore, and expose experiences, causes, effects, and the transitory variables that shape us in our daily Conscious-Constructed and Imaginary life. I see myself as a social archivist or action researcher exploring the ironies of contemporary social and racial politics.

He believes his calling is much bigger than just creating art. He explains, “My role as an artist and art educator is bigger than providing basic knowledge. I am called to be a moving ambassador for the arts. I want to expose people, especially my students to as much as possible and to foster their belief in the possibility of the impossible.

KRISTINE MAYS
Formed from hundreds of individual pieces of wire, Kristine Mays has developed a way of expressing the human form through wire.

“As an artist I am very aware of the impermanence of life. With metal wire I have timelessly captured a fleeting moment that I hope will last for decades. My artwork points to the soul and spirit, transporting the viewer into another place. It's about reconnecting to a deeper purpose -- the soul and spirit of our lives. I transform hard rigid wire into soft flowing movement. I create the outer shell, the exterior of a human being, but provoke you to see what's within. Memories and the way we have loved one another far outweigh our status or possessions -- and yet sometimes a simple dress or a body in motion may trigger a memory from the past, allowing us to visit that which has imprinted our lives.” - Kristine Mays

RHA BOWDEN
Rha Bowden, aka Eye Manifest, is a Boston native who has been living in Oakland for the last 15 years. Rha’s earliest experience as an artist occurred when he was 5 years old. His father saw a coloring contest sponsored by the Boston Aquarium in the Sunday paper. Armed with a new 50 count box of Crayola crayons and a dope imagination, little Rha filled the entire coloring page with vibrant colors and added unique decorations onto the multitude of sea creatures. When he arrived at the aquarium he was stunned to hear that they would not accept his entry because they refused to believe that a 5 yr old was capable of such skill.

Rha’s considers himself a jack of all trades and master of none. His creativity manifests in visual art, poetry, beat making, wire wrapped jewelry, graphic design, orgonite, crafting spiritual tools and other crafty en devours. His art is influenced by metaphysics, spirituality, sacred geometry, comic book art, graffiti and hip hop culture. Rha’s work frequently inspires others to tap into their creativity and spirituality. Many of his pieces have been placed in home altars and sacred spaces.

SHANI EALEY

Shani Ealey is a writer, visual artist, spirit chaser, and empath living in Oakland, CA, by way of Stockton, CA. Shani feels best when building authentic, supportive, and loving relationships within the Black community and queer and trans communities. For the last 7 years, they've been doing the communications support for organizations working toward social and racial justice. And while learning immensely from peers, mentors, and supervisors over the years, the structure and interpersonal dynamics within the traditional 9-5 office job just didn't fit with Shani’s spirit. It was this realization that led to the birth of a rhythm centered on intentional spirit-led artmaking.

It started in 2015. After quitting a particularly toxic racial justice org, Shani started drawing and painting everyday with no experience. AniKweens is what Shani calls them and they celebrated the beauty and wonder of the divine feminine. And for the first time Shani began intentionally diminishing the value they placed on the external and began to listen within. Shani started making zines (What the Spirit Says) which spill out the levels upon levels of anti-Blackness, co-optation and misuse of Black women's and queer and trans’ work, rampant colorism, and tokenism that is present within social and racial justice organizations.

The process of artmaking, creating, making the intangible tangible has been one of the most healing and nourishing practices in Shani's life. The belief that through art, through creating we have an opportunity to connect with our highest and truest selves. Through artmaking, we have the ability to reach down into the depths of who we are and affirm, heal, nourish, feed, witness, love and hold the parts of ourselves that need the most tending.

TIFFANY CONWAY
Tiffany was born in Long Beach California but after her mother succumbed to a drug addiction that broke up the family, her father and stepmother decided to raise her in the Bay Area, which she has resided most of her life. Tiffany’s art career has been that of an outsider of sorts. She’s been in and out of art school for most of her twenties but her 30th year and her latest stint in college is when it all started to click. She started a drawing image every day for 30 days. She used her creative playlist as a mechanism to respond to and when it was all said and done Project Get Free the Coloring Book for Navigating the Diaspora was born in 2016. The coloring book was a response to song lyrics which transformed into what she calls a “visual journal” of all the emotions she could not express in words. This was the beginning of her art career. From there, she has been painting nonstop and participated in several group shows including Open Studios and The Life is Living Annual Art Exhibition. She is still learning herself as an artist and finding her voice. But when she creates art she’s having a conversation with “self”. Her vision and purpose art an artist is to heal the women who continue to inspire her by making them feel seen, heard, soft and resilient. That’s black women.

ABOUT SOMARTS

SOMArts Cultural Center, founded in 1979, cultivates access to the arts within the Bay Area by collaborating with community-focused artists and organizations. Together, we engage the power of the arts to provoke just and fair inclusion, cultural respect and civic participation.

SOMArts plays a vital role in the arts ecosystem by helping activate the arts citywide. We do this by providing space and production support for non-profit events, as well as fairs and festivals throughout the Bay Area, and offering a robust program of art exhibitions, classes, events and performances that are affordable and accessible to all. SOMArts’ exhibition programs receive critical support from the San Francisco Arts Commission and The San Francisco Foundation, and are sponsored in part by a grant from Grants for the Arts.

SOMArts is located at 934 Brannan Street—between 8th and 9th—with 2 blocks of 101, I-80, Muni lines and bike paths. For public information call 415-863-1414 or visit somarts.org. Stay connected by following us on Twitter, Instagram and Facebook.
